

Media Concentration: conglomerates becoming absurd

I am writing to you today to reply to the public comments on Docket No.02-277, The Biennial Review of the FCC's broadcast media ownership rules.

This can't go on. At some point people stop trying and ignore the mass media. Media conglomerates are alienating their core audiences. Movie attendance is down, music purchasing is down, broadcast tv viewership is down and it's down among people who love movies, music and tv. There is a growing number of intelligent disenfranchised people who will at one point begin to circumvent the conglomerates and find ways to express themselves and distribute their media in ways that will devastate the established media companies now in existence. P2P is just the beginning. If you really have a stake in the stability of the media you will ensure that those with something to say have avenues to say it. That means policy that makes the media accessible to people not just multi-billion-dollar corporations.

Thank you,

Matthew Black
